6 - Which assignment or activity would you most recommend the instructor to use again when teaching the course in the future and why?

Response Rate	6/7 (85.71%)
- I really enjoyed the activities in the first few weeks. The debate on use of chimpanzees in biomedical research was really helpful for the oral exam. Distinguishing different moral theories in relation to veganism helped me for an in class quiz. I also enjoyed that one activity where we had to decide on whether we'd let refugees in. Anything that summarised the readings in a non-traditional way was beneficial. - I really enjoyed how our class was structured as discussion based with fun activities added into most classes. Specifically, the scenerio based activities in which we would have to come up with solutions to a problem in the scenerio were very beneficial to understanding how I personally feel about moral theories and immigration etc. It also puts it into perspective when you aren't able to choose one thing that fits everyone's values. - I think the class discussions and the quizzes are super helpful, they really help me stay on track. - oral exam - provides a chance for students to go through materials to share their own insights - Oral exams! - The in-class debate activity was engaging.

7 - Which assignment or activity could be improved and how?

Response Rate	4/7 (57.14%)
- Some days the discussions were quite slow and dry so I would encourage some of the discussion questions to be more active and require application. - While I really enjoy discussion based classes, I think with such a long class people may start to tune out at some point. Therefore, maybe adding more of these interactive activites could help keep people engaged. - quiz - the short-answer question can be confusing and I believe there could be better ways to show the students' dedication to the course - It was overall good, no need for improvement. However, this class is 2 hours and 45 minutes, which is too long for discussion classes, and it was scheduled at 8:30 am.

- I really liked that the small class size of this course and might suggest actually keeping it at maybe 10 people instead of 14 in the future because you actually get to engage with classmates and digest the material in a more interesting way - The nature of this course is to understand different value systems and so having discussions with my peers who come from different backgrounds and different moral understandings made this class really eye opening and formative for how I will frame my own thoughts and morals going forward. - I'm offended when one student in class mentioned about Japan Unit 731 in a joking tone. It's a tragedy and an inhumane act of what they have done to Chinese from any perspective. - none

- He is a very kind and responsible professor.
- I thought he was great. He was always willing to help and was just so encouraging throughout the whole session. If we were ever stressed or worried he would remind us that it would be okay. Additionally he was so willing to make changes to accommodate to our needs that I felt like I didn't have to stress about this class. It really let me enjoy the content and take part in discussions without additional pressure
- Professor Dylan is very knowledgeable and did a great job explaining concepts and ideas in managable ways for everyone to understand. My only criticism would be that maybe he could provide feedback for the quizzes on canvas, even if it is general corrections in the comments section under the quiz grade. Overall this was a great class and he taught it very well.
- I think Prof. Dylan Munson is wonderful. He's incredibly friendly and really encourages students. The classroom atmosphere feels so relaxed that I feel no stressed about speaking up, I think this is really important. I feel that many discussion-based classes create a lot of pressure, and sometimes it feels like students are speaking just for the sake of speaking. But his way of guiding the discussion is completely different. He kind of draws you in, makes the topics genuinely engaging, and you end up wanting to participate without even trying. That's something that really sets him apart from other professors! He also sends exam prompts and important information early, giving us plenty of time to prepare. and he answers our various questions with so much patience. I really enjoy the class even it start from 8:30 am. He's one of the best professors I've ever had!!!! Thank you so much!!!!
- Dylan is a great teacher who can inspire deep thoughts and engagement while sharing helpful knowledge from other subjects. I believe he will be a successful prof. in future.
- Dylan was good and friendly, learning from him was very intellectually engaging, and the class atmosphere was comfortable.
